COLLEGE 102: Bachelor Degrees

A bachelor (or baccalaureate) degree is a program of courses, which usually takes 4 years (or their equivalent by attending part-time, or through non-traditional means or accelerated terms). It requires at least 120-128 semester hour credits or 180-192 quarter hours. This equates to at least 40 courses. You learn a considerable amount in a particular field of study (the major) and broad general knowledge.

Schools on a semester plan have terms, which last 4-4 1/2 months---a fall and spring semester, and a shorter summer term. At schools with a quarter plan, each quarter lasts 10-12 weeks. Some schools have accelerated terms---terms are shorter and the student has more class time per week

Courses generally fall in THREE major areas:

General Education Courses---usually 36-45 semester hours

Courses in your major---at least 30 semester credits

Electives--- Courses of the student's own choosing. Some are recommended, depending on your major.

At the completion of studies, you will earn either a Bachelor of Science (B.S) or a Bachelor of Arts (B.A.) depending on your major.
